

One of the key attributes of Limo is that it unifies search across all of the library's resources: by default any search action performed in Limo can return results from the local physical collection (print books and journals, audiovisual materials and digital objects) as well as multiple scientific and scholarly databases and e-journal collections contained in the K.U.Leuven e-resources collection.

This is a huge improvement over the traditional library catalog, which contains hardly any journal articles or e-book chapters.

For you, the end user, no extra steps are required and all search results appear on your screen simultaneously, in the blink of an eye. In the background, however, Limo runs your query through different sources. The records from databases and e-journal collections are retrieved in the Primo Central index maintained by Ex Libris. At present this index covers a selection of our licensed resources, but their number will continue to grow as and when additional content providers agree to have their resources indexed in Primo Central. This, however, will be an ongoing process for quite some time to come. On this page we undertake to give you a clear overview of the contents that are covered by Limo, or not (yet). It will be permanently updated.

Not searchable in Limo (last update: January 16, 2012)

The resources not (yet) covered by LIMO include, but are not limited to the major databases and collections listed below. If they have a native search interface you can search them there following the links provided. Alternatively you can find the direct link to these and any other databases in the K.U.Leuven e-collection using the "Browse Databases" tab available at the top of every Limo page. Under 'category' you can specify whether or not you are looking for databases that are searchable in Limo.
